HANDBOOK ON TRAINING FOR TEACHING: PUBLISHED FOR THE ASSOCIATION OF TEACHERS IN TRAINING COLLEGES AND DEPARTMENTS OF EDUCATION. 1954. pp. viii + 408. Demy 8vo. 21s.

This Handbook on Training for Teaching has been compiled to meet a need long felt, particularly by the heads of grammar schools, who are responsible for giving advice to boys and girls anxious to choose teaching as a career. The Handbook is planned to be of particular use for those wishing to enter the teaching profession, but it should also be of value to others less directly concerned with training. Indeed, it is hoped that it will be a reference book for anyone seeking information about education for teaching and the provision made for it in England and Wales.

Boehme, Jacob. THE CONFESSIONS OF JACOB BOEHME. Compiled and edited by W. Score Palmer. With an Introduction by Evelyn Underhill. 2nd edition. 1954. pp. xxxvi + 153. Small Pott 8vo. 6s. net

'Jacob Boehme (1575–1624), who reveals to us in this book some of the secrets of his inner life, was among the most original of the great Christian mystics. With a natural genius for the things of the spirit, he also exhibited many of the characteristics of the psychic, the seer, and the metaphysician; and his influence on philosophy has been at least as great as his influence on religious mysticism.' From the Introduction by Evelyn Underhill.

This book is based on a thorough study over many years of the geography of Germany—by tramping through its countryside and towns, very often in the company of German geographers. While the work primarily has reference to the Germany of 1939, the post-war trends are examined in their geographical significance. The work should serve as a basis for assessing the problems and possibilities of the post-war Germany that arise from the changes in its economy and population and from its changed situation in the European scene.

After a short explanation of how we hear music in all its immense variety of different notes and different colours of tone, there follows a straightforward account of how the different orders of string, wind, percussion and electrophonic instruments work. This leads to a full description of all those instruments which composers whose music is now in favour employ.

Orphic beliefs, which offer many points of similarity not only to other mystery-religions but to Christianity itself, have been the subject of lively controversy. In the author's opinion, one reason for this has been the free discussion of them by anthropologists and students of comparative religion before Greek scholarship had established their existence and nature from a survey of the ancient evidence itself. This survey is attempted here.

Le May, G., Professor of Local Government and Public Administration in the University of the Witwatersrand. BRITISH GOVERNMENT 1914-53: SELECT DOCUMENTS. 1954. pp. xx + 412. Demy 8vo. 25s. net

This collection of documents, compiled by a former Oxford tutor, is the first to show in detail how the structure and conventions of British government have changed since the First World War. It prints nearly fifty statutes, and contains long extracts from Debates, White Papers and Reports dealing with problems of delegated legislation, administrative jurisdiction, the parliamentary control of public corporations, the civil service and local government. It is divided into five sections:

I. Statutes; II. Parliamentary Proceedings; III. The Executive; IV. Judicial Proceedings; V. The Parties and the Electorate.

Many of the Government papers included in this book are difficult and expensive to obtain. It will be valuable to all students of modern constitutional history and government administration.

MAN MEETS DOG. Translated from the German by Marjorie Kerr Wilson. With numerous line drawings. 1954. Twice reprinted pp. x + 199. Small Demy 8vo. 15s. net

A book about dogs—and cats—but with a difference, for after reading these humane and amusing chapters we may look with different eyes on those once wild animals that lie upon the mat.

How, why and when did man meet dog and cat? How much are they in fact guided by instinct, and what sort of intelligence have they? What is the nature of their affection or attachment to the human race? Dr. Lorenz says that some dogs are descended from wolves and some from jackals, with strikingly different results in canine personality. These differences he explains in a book full of entertaining stories and reflections.

[The Arden Shakespeare

This edition, though based on Henry Cunningham's edition of 1912, is something more than a revision. The new introduction embodies the latest findings of scholarship; the text has been thoroughly overhauled so as to bring it closer to that of the First Folio; nearly all the notes contain alterations, and many of them are entirely new.

4732/U

HENRY V. Edited by J. H. Walter. 4th edition, 1954. pp. xlviii + 167. Demy 8vo. 15s. net [The Arden Shakespeare]

After reference to the diversity of critical and editorial comment, the introduction examines the character of Shakespeare's Henry in the light of medieval and renaissance theories of the ideal Christian king. Some parallels are noted between Henry and the ideal prince depicted by Erasmus and Chelidonius. Fresh evidence from the text supports the view that Henry underwent a religious conversion. The historical background and the epic qualities of the play are shown to be consistent with these views. The glossarial notes contain much new material.

[The Arden Shakespeare]

This completely revised edition of the Arden Tempest sets out to achieve three ends. It offers a carefully prepared text, with apparatus. It provides notes on the text containing much new material for elucidation of the language and ideas of the play, together with appendices on such subjects as 'The Tempest on the Jacobean stage' and the music of the play (including music never before printed). Most important, it has a long critical introduction, which not only gives a full account of previous investigations, but presents a completely new theory of the meaning of the play, supported by detailed scholarship.

Strahler, Arthur N., Associate Professor of Geomorphology, Columbia University. EXERCISES ON LANDFORMS. With 36 maps and diagrams, 1953, pp. iv + 40, Crown 4to. 2s. 6d.

One of the most useful features of Professor Strahler's monumental Physical Geography, published by Chapman & Hall Ltd. in this country, and by John Wiley & Sons, Inc., in U.S.A., is the series of exercises at the end of each chapter. Many of these are based on large maps or diagrams in the book, which the reader naturally does not wish to deface. We have therefore published the exercises on land forms in this separate book, believing that it will prove very useful to schools and colleges. It is complete in itself, and can be used with any course on geomorphology, though the student will naturally find it most effective when used in conjunction with Professor Strahler's major work. The standard is that of the sixth form or the first year of a university course.

The Story Biography Series

Edited by ELEANOR GRAHAM

A new series of biographies told in story form for boys and girls of 10–15. The authors have tried to present their subjects with the freedom and authority of original stories while adhering faithfully to the facts as they are known. The reader may thus see the Great Names as human men and women, having to think and plan and contrive their daily lives like anyone else, and may so discover how ordinary boys and girls came to be famous men and women.

Each Demy 8vo. Illustrated. Paper. 2s.

For local studies, reference-books must be cheap, handy and self-contained, so that each explorer may carry one, and can use it independently, in or out of school. These 'Get to Know' booklets ask simple questions (e.g. 'Where is the largest window?') which make the explorer look; they enable him—or her—to identify what is seen, and to understand its purpose and significance. The booklets are simply written and fully illustrated in line, with maps, historical and geographical summaries, lists of local examples worth visiting, etc.

The Westminster Commentaries

Edited by WALTER LOCK, D.D., and D. C. SIMPSON, D.D. Demy 8vo.

The object of each commentary is primarily exegetical, to interpret the author's meaning to the present generation. The editors, taking the English text in the Revised Verson as their basis, try to combine a hearty acceptance of critical principles with loyalty to the Catholic Faith.

The Nuffield College Social Reconstruction Survey Series

General Editors: G. D. H. COLE and A. D. LINDSAY

The Nuffield College Social Reconstruction Survey was set up in 1941 to investigate problems of economic and social reconstruction, under the direction of Professor G. D. H. Cole. Two of the volumes contributed to the series, i.e. Voluntary Social Services, edited by A. F. C. BOURDILLON, and Studies in Industrial Organization, edited by H. A. SILVERMAN, are now out of print.

Travel and Topography The Little Guides

General Editor: EDMUND VALE

Each illustrated. Small Pott 8vo. 7s. 6d. net

This standard series, now being re-issued, is in process of revision by carefully chosen topographers.

A general introduction is followed by a gazetteer of the places of interest, references being included to a gridded map. All the volumes have been brought up to date, each contains numerous illustrations and, as always, the books can readily be carried in the pocket.

Accurate and comprehensive, the new Little Guides are again proving that within their scope and at their modest price, they are the best county guides available.

General Editor: E. A. R. ENNION, M.A.

Each illustrated in colour and line. F'cap 4to.

Field Study Books discuss countryside problems from the intimate angle of the expert. Their appeal is to the student, to the general reader, and to the older schoolchild. Amply illustrated in colour and line, they cover a wide range and always from the Field rather than from the Classroom or the Laboratory aspect. They deal with the various branches of Biology, including animal and plant Ecology; with Geology, Regional Geography, and Archaeology; with Art and countryside Architecture; with country crafts and lore and history—with everything, in short, whose natural setting is the open air.
